WHY M. STALIN DEMANDS A SECOND FRONT

M. STALIN.

FAITH IN POWER OF UNITED NATIONS

M. STALIN, in a speech last night in Moscow, emphasised the urgency of a second front, saying that if there had been such a front in Europe the Red Army now would be nearing the Baltic and the Western Ukraine, and "as early as last summer the German-Fascist armies would have been on the verge of collapse."

During the first World War, he said, there was a second front against Germany, and, out of 220 divisions which she had then, not more than 85 faced the Russians, apart from the divisions of her allies.

Now not less than 172 German divisions were standing against Russia, together with 61 Axis divisions—a total of 240 out of 256 divisions at Germany's disposal.

The remaining Axis divisions were in the occupied countries, and "some of them were fighting in Libya and Egypt against England, but these numbered only four German and eleven Italian divisions."

A second front, he said, will come, "not only because we need it, but, above all, because it is no less needed by our allies, who must realise that, after the fall of France, the absence of a second front might mean disaster for all freedom-loving countries, including themselves."

He stressed the power of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition, and mentioned the "complete understanding concerning the relations between our two countries" when Mr. Churchill was in Moscow.

M. Stalin said: "I have been asked to give a review of the achievement of our country during the past year, from last November to this month. The activity of the Government was exerted in two directions—(1) The organisation of the home front; (2) Defensive and offensive operations of the Red Army. On the home side our activity has taken the form of evacuating our industries to the eastern part of Russia, of an increase in the sown area for agriculture, and of a strengthening of labour discipline in the rear.

NO ACCIDENT

"It is surely no accident that the German forces which have marched triumphantly through the whole of Europe, which routed the French armies at a blow which was considered to be first class, encountered their first serious set-back in our country. They not only encountered a set-back, but they were compelled under the blows of the Red Army to retreat from positions they had occupied, more than 400 kilometres, abandoning in their retreat colossal quantities of arms, tanks and ammunition. The second period of the year saw the German advance to Voronezh, Stalingrad, Novorisisk, Pyatigorks, and Mozdok.

"How shall we explain the fact that the Germans have succeeded in gaining a serious tactical success on our front? The explanation is that the Germans and their allies succeeded in assembling all their available reserves, in throwing them on the Eastern front, and in establishing on one front a large numerical superiority. There is no doubt that the Germans would not otherwise have been able to attain a success on our front.

"The main reason for German successes on our front then is that the absence of a second front in Europe enabled them to transfer to our front all their spare reserves, and to achieve a great superiority in the south-west. Let us suppose that there had been a second front in Europe, such as existed during the first World War, and that the second front had diverted, let us say, sixty German divisions and twenty divisions of Germany's allies, what would have been the situation of the German armies in that case? It is obvious that it would have been lamentable. It would have been the beginning of the end of the German-Fascist armies; for the Red Army would have been, not where it is now, but near Pskov, Minsk, Zhitomir and Odessa. This means that as early as last summer the German-Fascist armies would have been on the verge of collapse. That this has not happened is because the Germans were saved by the absence of a second front in Europe.

SOME FACTS

M. Stalin dealt with the effects of a second front during the first World War and went on—"What is the situation now? Let us take September of this year. According to verified data which are beyond all doubt, out of 256 divisions at Germany's disposal, not less than 179 German divisions are standing against us. If we add the 22 Rumanian divisions, 14 Finnish, 10 Italian, 13 Hungarian, one Slovak and one Spanish, the total would come to 240 divisions which are at present fighting against the Red Army. The remaining German divisions and those of their allies are doing garrison service in the occupied countries. Some of them are fighting in Libya and Egypt against England. They are diverting only four German divisions and eleven Italian. That means that instead of a total of 127 divisions—including allies—the Germans now have against us no fewer than 240 divisions, and instead of 85 divisions of German troops no fewer than 179 divisions of German troops fighting against the Red Army. That is the main cause and foundation of the tactical successes of the German-Fascist armies on our front last summer.

SOONER OR LATER

"The question is often asked: 'Will there be a second front in Europe after all?'" (Some shouts at the back of "Yes, there will.") "Yes, there will be," said M. Stalin. "Sooner or later it will come to pass. And it will come to be not only because we need it, but, above all, because it is no less needed by our Allies than by us. Our Allies must realise that after France was struck out of the war the absence of a second front against Fascist Germany might mean disaster for all freedom-loving countries, including the Allies themselves.

"It can be taken for granted now that in the course of the war imposed on the nations by Hitlerite Germany, two opposite camps have been formed—the camp of the Italo-German coalition and the camp of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition. It is also indisputable that these two coalitions, opposing each other, are guided by two different and opposing programmes.

"The programme of the Italo-German coalition can be characterised as follows:—Racial hatred, the supremacy of the chosen nations, the subjugation of other nations, the seizure of their territories, economic enslavement of the conquered nations, the depredation of their national wealth, the destruction of democratic liberty, and the establishment of a Hitlerite régime everywhere.

"The programme of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition is:—The abolition of racial exclusiveness, the equality of nations and inviolability of their territories, the liberation of the enslaved nations and the restoration of their sovereign rights; the right of establishing whatever régime they like, economic assistance to the countries which have suffered, and help to be given to them in achieving material welfare; the restoration of democratic liberty and the destruction of the Hitlerite régime.

"One of the most characteristic features of the present moment is that the isolation of the Italo-German coalition and the exhaustion of its moral and political resources in Europe are gradually increasing. The Italo-German coalition is progressively becoming weaker.

"The programme of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition has led to this result—that all the occupied countries of Europe are filled with sympathy for the members of this coalition, and are ready to give it any assistance they are capable of. The moral and political resources of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition are daily increasing in Europe, and not only in Europe; this coalition is gradually winning millions of sympathisers, willing to fight side by side with it against Hitler's tyranny.

"If we examine the strength of the two coalitions from the point of view of human and material resources, we cannot help arriving at the conclusion that there is an indisputable advantage on the side of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition. But the question is—is this advantage great enough to achieve victory? I see no reason to doubt it.

"Is the programme of action of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition sufficient to organise the common struggle against the Hitlerite pyramid and achieve victory? I believe that it is quite sufficient, and the idea of the contrary has been fully disproved by the events of the past year."

CHURCHILL VISIT

M. Stalin spoke of an important step—the visit to Moscow of the British Prime Minister, Mr. Churchill, in the course of which a complete understanding was reached concerning the relations between the two countries.

"There is no doubt that facts speak of a progressive rapprochement among the U.S.S.R., Britain and the United States of America, tending towards the formation of a fighting alliance against the Italo-German coalition. The logic of events is stronger than any other kind of logic. The Anglo-Soviet-American coalition has every chance of achieving victory over the Italo-German coalition—indeed, there is no doubt about its victory."

FUEL FOR THE POOR

MANSION HOUSE APPEAL

The urgent need for even more generous support for the Mansion House Coal Fund was pressed at yesterday's annual meeting of the fund. The annual report, submitted by the hon. secretary (Mr. M. A. Corrigan), showed that 8,000 bags of fuel had been distributed during the past season, but in view of the very great demands which will be made during the present winter the Committee earnestly appealed to the charitable public, notwithstanding many other demands on their generosity, to contribute promptly and quickly to the Fund.

The Lord Mayor (Alderman P. S. Doyle), who presided, said that fuel was necessary for the life of the poor—for washing their clothes, for making poultices for sick children, for driving out damp from the miserable rooms many of them had to inhabit. They would also have to meet the claims of those silent poor, many of whom had never had to have recourse to charity, but who in these bitter days were coming increasingly under the notice of the charitable societies.

Mr. Hubert Briscoe said that the response of the comfortably-off people had been most generous, but people who had not been so comfortably off in the past, but who were now earning big money, should give a little of their earnings to their less fortunate fellows. He thought that bodies like trade unions with large funds should send in subscriptions.

Senator P. Kelly said there never was a time when the success of the Fund meant so much.

Rev. M. F. Boylan, Adm., Pro-Cathedral, said that the Fund was a tradition of Dublin, and he believed the citizens would rise nobly to the call this year.

Rev. T. Byers, M.A., Ormond Quay and Scots Church, who has succeeded Rev. J. C. Breakey as Hon. Secretary, said that drying clothes when they got wet was a big problem for the poor, who usually had only one suit or dress. Fuel was, therefore, a dire necessity.

MAN KILLED BY 'PLANE

Frederick Strutt, electrician, of Fleming road, Drumcondra, was working at an aerodrome in Northern Ireland when a 'plane, which had just landed, went off the runway and collided with him. His neck was dislocated. At an inquest yesterday a verdict of accidental death was returned.

Down the field like greased lightning
he spurted,
To the crowd on the touch-line he blurted:

RUSSIAN FRONTS STAND FIRM

GERMANS CHECKED

MOSCOW, Friday. — General Lvov's troops fighting in the rocky slopes of the Caucasus mountains have again pushed the Germans back from the Black Sea coast north of Tuapse, says Reuter's Special Correspondent. For the eleventh day in succession the Red Army has made an advance in this vital sector, where the German troops are attempting to break through to the Southern Caucasus towards Batum.

At the other end of the Caucasus front the German advance from Nalchik has been checked. After three days of bitter fighting in the valleys and hills, the Russians have regrouped their forces and are holding firm. The onslaught in the Mozdok area, where an attempt is being made to develop a pincer movement against the Grozny oil-fields, has also been held.

Inside Stalingrad for seven successive days the defenders have not only beaten off all German attacks, but have counter-attacked in some sectors and improved their positions.

GERMAN LOSSES

German losses in the last two weeks have been more than usually heavy. Preliminary figures show that since the Red Army seized the initiative on the Tuapse-Novorossisk front, the Germans and Rumanians have lost over 10,000 men.

The Germans recently attempted a strong attack on the Voronezh front, where they are badly hampered by the Soviet bridgeheads on the west side of the Don. Their infantry assault was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage of more than 3,000 shells, but when Tommy-gunners and riflemen struck from north and south-west they were met by a hail of Russian fire which cost them 300 men.—(Reuter.)

SOVIET REPORT

MOSCOW, Friday.—The Soviet communiqué states that on November 6th their warships in the Baltic sank a German transport of 15,000 tons. The supplement states that in the area of Stalingrad German aircraft attacks were repulsed. Under the blows of the Red Army units, the Germans were compelled to retreat to their initial positions. About 1,000 Germans were killed.

U.S.S.R. ANNIVERSARY

MR. EDEN'S MESSAGE

Mr. Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, has sent a message to the Russian people, which appears in The British Ally, on the 25th birthday of the U.S.S.R.

Mr. Eden says:—"The heroic resistance of the Red Army and of the whole Soviet nation, to the predatory aggression of Hitlerite Germany, has demonstrated to friend and foe alike, the moral strength and material power of the edifice which the people of the U.S.S.R. have erected in the last 25 years. Their united determination to defend the fruits of their labours gives them the assurance of victory. Twenty-five years ago they were alone. To-day they are supported by powerful Allies, who share their resolve to annihilate the aggressor and to bring to justice, in due course, those guilty of a million crimes.

"The people of Great Britain, who faced this enemy alone for one long year, know both the gnawing bitterness of isolation and the strengthening comfort of alliance. The power of the grand coalition that has now arisen is forcing the enemy on the defensive, and the day is approaching when the United Nations will re-enter into their own, and the German invader be driven out of all the lands which he has seized and devastated.

"As allies in this great task, as also in the work of post-war reconstruction, the Soviet Union and Great Britain are co-operating closely and confidently, inspired by the spirit of the Anglo-Soviet Treaty of last May which ensures that our two nations, both during the war and for the next 20 years, will march together for the benefit of human progress and liberty."

GERMAN CASUALTIES

M. Stalin's Order of the Day says that the German casualties since the start of the war in Russia total over 8,000,000 officers and men.—(Reuter.)

GIBRALTAR ACTIVITY

Saturday.—German Radio reported from Algeciras early to-day that H.M.S. Rodney left Gibraltar yesterday escorted by a fighter "air umbrella." It added that twelve twin-engined and four four-engined 'planes arrived at Gibraltar yesterday from the "direction of the Atlantic."—(Reuter.)

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS FOR SMOKERS

CIGARETTES and tobacco will be available in somewhat larger quantities for Irish smokers this Christmas.

As foreshadowed in the Irish Times three weeks ago, the existing supplies will be increased by ten per cent. under an Order which will be made by the Minister for Finance. The decision to increase the flow of tobacco is due to an improvement in stocks, and in a short time increased quantities of unmanufactured tobacco will be permitted to be released from bonded warehouses for home consumption.

Since March of last year the amount of unmanufactured tobacco cleared from bonded warehouses for home consumption has been restricted to eighty per cent. of the quantity cleared in 1940. The new increase of one-eighth means that the smoker who consumed ten cigarettes per day pre-war, and who since last March is getting eight, should be getting nine cigarettes per day when retailers' new stocks come along.

A prominent manufacturer told the Irish Times last night that the flow of cigarettes in the shops will be freer at Christmas, and that, with leaf purchased in America, there is no fear of further restrictions.

DUBLIN GIRL'S DETENTION

JUDGE AND PRINCIPLES OF LIBERTY

Mr. Justice Hanna, in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, made no rule on the adjourned motion for a conditional order of habeas corpus for the production of Miss Margaret O'Halloran, domestic servant, 32 Gardiner's place, Dublin, who is detained in Mountjoy Prison.

Mr. Lavery, K.C., for Miss O'Halloran, told the judge that since the matter last had been before the Court the Minister for Justice had made an Order for the detention of the girl under Emergency Powers No. 20 Order (which gave him power to detain people by warrant), and that, as that Order must be accepted as final, he could not now move this motion. "But," he added, "if those steps, severe as they were, had been taken at the proper time, this application would never have been brought."

The application for a conditional order originally came before the President of the High Court, when it was stated that Mr. J. H. Dixon, Miss O'Halloran's solicitor, on learning that she was in the Central Bridewell, called there, but was not allowed to see her. The case was adjourned on the following day until yesterday.

Mr. Murnaghan, K.C. (for the Governor of Mountjoy Prison, where Miss O'Halloran now is, said that she had been detained under the Offences against the State Act.

EMERGENCY POWERS

Even when these Emergency Powers were put in force the Court must, said Mr. Justice Hanna, have some regard to the principles of liberty which were supposed to protect individuals. So far as he could gather from the case, he thought that information should have been given to Mr. Dixon at an earlier date. Mr. Dixon could not interfere, but he could have been informed where Miss O'Halloran was, and why she was being detained. Emergency Orders were not secret; they were public Orders that everybody was supposed to be given information about.

Mr. Sherry said that on the last occasion an undertaking had been given that Mr. Dixon would see his client.

Mr. Lavery—He saw her after the application to the Court.

Mr. Sherry said that it was a matter entirely for the person in charge of the detained party to say whether a solicitor could see that party or not.

It seemed extraordinary, said Mr. Justice Hanna, if counsel's contention was right, they can not only detain a person for eight days, but give no information to anyone concerned where the particular person is. Surely one can imagine the distress in which relatives and parents of a person who has been detained in that way would be. Surely it would not interfere with the powers of the State to give information that she was being detained.

TUBERCULOSIS OF BOVINE ORIGIN

DANGER TO PUBLIC

IF forty per cent. of Irish cows were producing tuberculin-infected milk, virtually every man, woman and child in this country would have contracted tuberculosis already.

Authorities on the subject, approached by the Irish Times yesterday, were anxious to emphasise this point by way of correcting a wrong impression gained by the public as a result of the statement recently at a meeting of the Dublin Corporation, that 40 per cent. of our cattle were infected with tuberculosis.

SERIOUS PROBLEM

While bovine tuberculosis presents a serious problem in this country, actually only one per cent. of the milch cows in the twenty-six counties are affected by the disease to the extent of transmitting the germs in the milk, and the cattle population in Dublin is so free from infection that it is regarded as one of the cleanest counties in Ireland. Kerry and Galway also are exceptionally free from the disease, but in some of the dairy districts its incidence is as high as ninety per cent. of the cattle population, and the extent to which it is transmitted, especially to young children, in whom it causes bone tuberculosis, is sufficiently great to cause concern.

This aspect of the T.B. problem will be in the limelight shortly through the activities of the National Anti-Tuberculosis League, under whose auspices a meeting of medical men will take place in Dublin next week.

CATTLE-REARING

An infectious disease, bovine tuberculosis, like human tuberculosis, is maintained by insanitary conditions, and Lieutenant-Colonel A. G. Doherty, M.C., M.R.C.V.S., Hon. Secretary of the Veterinary Medical Association of Ireland, stated yesterday that the organisms were well known, but, unfortunately, the conditions under which many young cattle were reared helped it to flourish, although it should be made quite clear that large areas in Eire were quite free of it. "Modern science," he said, "has provided us with knowledge which can reduce to a minimum the risk of young cattle becoming infected.

"Healthy calves will grow into healthy cattle; and, when this knowledge is used efficiently, the livestock industry will no longer have to bear the cost of wastage from tuberculosis, and the wastage of human life from tuberculosis of bovine origin will cease to be a cause of anxiety."

BAD HOUSING

The number of dangerous cattle in the country—dangerous in the sense that they excreted tuberculosis organisms in the milk—was relatively small, Mr. J. Flynn, Chief Veterinary Officer for County Dublin, observed, adding that north of Dublin the country was comparatively free of the disease. It was, unfortunately, true that in some areas much more than forty per cent. of the cattle were affected, mainly because housing conditions for them in the dairy districts were very wrong.

"I cannot say that we are making very much progress with this colossal problem at present," he said. "The establishment of tubercle-free herds under the Milk and Dairies Act has done some good so far as it has developed, but we have yet to tackle the job on a regional basis, such as they did in America from the Atlantic seaboard to the Middle West, and clear the disease out bit by bit. Regional eradication, with a stop on the movements of cattle into cleared areas, would be the ideal way of dealing with it, cost what it may."

SIX AXIS SHIPS SUNK

TWO OTHERS DAMAGED

A British Admiralty report yesterday stated:—

"Six more enemy vessels have been sunk and two large enemy supply ships damaged by His Majesty's submarines operating in the Mediterranean. The submarine under the command of Lieutenant E. T. Stanley, D.S.C., R.N., intercepted two enemy coastal vessels laden with food and, after the crews had abandoned them, boarded and destroyed them. Another submarine, under the command of Lieutenant H. S. MacKenzie, D.S.O., R.N., attacked a medium-sized enemy supply ship, escorted by two destroyers. The supply ship was torpedoed and sunk.

"The same submarine also sunk two small enemy supply ships and a tug-boat. A large enemy supply ship which was beached, and on which salvage operations were proceeding, was attacked by the submarine under the command of Lieutenant S. L. C. Maydon, R.N., and was hit by a torpedo. Further attempts at salvage were rendered impossible.

"The submarine under the command of Lieutenant M. B. St. John, R.N., has reported two hits with torpedoes on a large enemy tanker, escorted by destroyers and aircraft. One of the destroyers was possibly hit by a torpedo."

Women May Go Hatless To Church in England

Women and girls can now go to church in Great Britain without hats, and no objection should be raised to anyone who does so.

A statement to this effect was issued yesterday by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York. It said:—

"Questions are frequently asked in these days concerning the old customary rule that women should not enter a church building with their heads uncovered.

"The Scriptural authority behind thus rule is St. Paul's regulation, but this required that they should be veiled.

"That has long ago fallen out of use, and, after consulting with the bishops generally, we wish it to be known that no woman or girl should hesitate to enter a church uncovered, nor should any objection to their doing so be raised."

The "old customary rule" to which the announcement refers was based on St. Paul's First Epistle to the Coginthians—xi., 4, 5, 6:

"Every man praying or prophesying, having his head covered, dishonoureth his head.

"But every woman that prayeth or prophesieth with her head un covered dishonoureth her head, for that is even all one as if she were shaven

"For if the woman be not covered, let her also be shorn, but if it be a shame for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her be covered."

PIG PRICES INCREASED

Increased prices and a new classification of pigs will operate as from Monday next, under orders made by the Pigs and Bacon Commission, it was announced yesterday.

The new classes and prices are as follows:—

Class 1—Dead-weight 1 cwt. 14lb. to 1 cwt. 3 qrs. 7lb., 125s. per cwt.; live-weight, 1 cwt. 2 qrs. to 2 cwts. 1 qr. 18 lb. 93s. 6d. per cwt.

Class 2—Other pigs, except sows, dead-weight, 110s. per cwt.; live-weight, 82s. 6d. per cwt.

Class 3—Sows, dead-weight, 100s. per cwt.; live-weight, 75s. per cwt.

The first contingent of the Canadian Women's Army Corps to go overseas on active service has arrived in the United Kingdom, Canadian Military Headquarters in Britain announced last night.

BRITISH ADVANCE OF 100 MILES

HOT-FOOT PURSUIT OF RETREATING AXIS

GENERAL MONTGOMERY'S Eighth Army is steadily pressing on in pursuit of the retreating Axis forces, and Reuter's Special Correspondent reported last night that fighting is now taking place with Axis rearguards at a point nearly 100 miles from El Alamein, where the offensive was launched a fortnight ago.

More than 4,000 Axis prisoners were brought in on Thursday, and thousands more are said to have been rounded up in the southern sector.

Among the latest prisoners are General Francesco Scatti, Italian Commander of the Trento Division, and his Chief of Staff. Over 60 more Italian and 20 more German tanks were captured on Thursday.

MERSA MATRUH NEXT

British armoured and infantry forces are taking precautions against running into any concentration of Axis anti-tank guns, as they did some months ago when they were within sight of success. The next big objective is now Mersa Matruh, Marshal Rommel's most advanced supply base, which has been badly battered by Allied bombers during recent weeks.

There is still no sign of any organised stand by the Axis armies, which have now lost the protection of the Qattara Depression on their southern, or inland, flank, says Reuter. They may turn around and make a fight at Halfaya ("Hellfire") Pass, some 120 miles beyond Mersa Matruh, and twice that distance from the point at which the Eighth Army launched its offensive. Halfaya Pass, because of its terrain, lends itself to speedily organised defence. It has been the scene of furious fighting in the ebb and flow of the desert war.

AMERICAN TANKS

New American Sherman tanks are reported to be playing a prominent part in the offensive. The Sherman—most powerful tank yet used in desert warfare—is an improved model of the General Grant, which had previously been in action, and was altered after battle experience. Stronger in every way than its prototype, its 75 m.m. gun is at least the equal of any mounted in the most powerful tanks remaining at Marshal Rommel's disposal.

No attempt is being made to allow gratification over the British success to overshadow the fact that hard fighting still lies ahead of the Eighth Army if it is to smash Marshal Rommel's remaining panzers. Marshal Rommel's skill in generalship is not underestimated either. If and when the opportunity presents itself he may order his forces to about face and engage the Allies with his battered main force. It is that force—the core of Axis opposition in North Africa—which the British are determined to wipe out.—(Reuter.)

Reuter's Special Correspondent with the Eighth Army stated last night that reports received yesterday suggest that the remnants of Marshal Rommel's retreating army are being loosely screened by tanks and anti-tank guns south of the Mediterranean coast road. There was no great organised Axis resistance east of Daba.

To what extent the Axis armour is now fighting or holding off the Allies' armoured corps d'élite is not known, but Axis transport streaming to the west is still being heavily bombed. The Eighth Army's forces operating west of El Alamein are all mobile. They are encountering odd anti-tank posts, some of which they captured on Thursday. South-east of Daba five Italian M 13 tank crews surrendered with their tanks in perfect running order.

THE AXIS RETREAT

Latest reports indicate that the bulk of Marshal Rommel's Army is in complete retreat just east of Mersa Matruh, says Reuter's Special Correspondent in a telegram early this morning. The British troops are streaming over the western horizon to bring the main Axis forces to action. Far across the desert, south of Daba, large Axis pockets, mostly Italians, but including some German parachute troops, are surrounded. Three thousand Italians have already surrendered in a bunch. Their plight was hopeless, as they were forty miles from the nearest water.

The Eighth Army has flung a cordon round all the remaining Axis troops west of Fuka. British tanks, anti-tank guns and heavier artillery are hammering them to pieces, to the accompaniment of violent bombing from the air. The Axis armoured screen in the north finally cracked on Thursday before Marshal Rommel could pull in his southern flank. As the Eighth Army's tanks and infantry began to spread out, Marshal Rommel had to stretch it wider and wider, until finally it began to give way at several points. It was then that the rout began.

Reuter's Special Correspondent at General Montgomery's Desert H.Q. told the war correspondents of the "complete and absolute victory of the Eighth Army in the battle of El Alamein." Three armoured divisions, he said, had driven two hard wedges through the Axis lines; and now Allies' armour had passed through. Portions of the Axis armies which could get away were in full retreat. Large numbers of Axis troops facing the Allies in the South could not escape, and would be captured.

"Don't think we can let up," General Montgomery added. "We have to keep up the pressure and knock the enemy for six—right out of North Africa."

President Roosevelt declared in Washington yesterday, says Reuter, that all the United Nations are very much heartened by the victory of major importance in the Egyptian-Libyan area. He added that things seem to be going pretty well there.

The President summed-up by saying that the Allied campaign had the appearance of a victory of major proportions.

Mr. Churchill yesterday sent a message to Mr. Forde, Commonwealth Army Minister, conveying warmest congratulations on the fresh distinction of the Australian Ninth Division in the Eighth Army's triumph. "In what may well be a decisive victory this division has played a glorious part," Mr. Churchill said.—(Reuter.)

JAPANESE ATTACKS REPULSED

FIGHTING IN SOLOMONS

WASHINGTON, Friday.—Several strong Japanese counter-attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses, a United States Navy Department communiqué reported to-night about the fighting on Guadalcanal.

The communiqué states that during the night of November 4-5 Japanese troops launched several strong counter-attacks against United States forces in the area west of Matanikau River, on Guadalcanal Island. The attacks were repulsed with heavy Japanese losses. United States forces engaged Japanese troops during continuous air patrols which were maintained over their lines. No change is reported in United States eastern positions in the vicinity of Koli Point.—(Reuter.)

POSTMEN'S TYRES

Postmen who use their bicycles for official purposes are assured of a regular supply of new tyres. The Minister for Posts and Telegraphs has informed the Post Office Workers' Union that tyres and tubes will be made available. Ample supplies of carbide for the postmen's lamps is also available, and there is, therefore, no case for an alteration in the hour of commencement—7.30 a.m.—at present generally in operation for rural services.

COLLECTORS IN UNIFORM

In a week or two the thirty-four employés of Wastepaper Ltd. will appear in uniforms. The idea of doing this had been in the mind of the company manager, Mr. E. P. Williams, for some time, as he thought that it would have a good psychological effect both on the public and the collectors. It was difficult, however, to obtain material because of cloth scarcity. Through a piece of good luck he found a quantity of good gaberdine-type of cloth of a striking grey-and-white stripe pattern. A sample coat has been made up of shop-coat length, with a high neck, and it awaits approval by the directors.

POTATOES FOR ORANGES

If you need three ounces of golden orange juice, all you have to do is to eat a pound of newly-lifted home-grown potatoes, and you have the equivalent of that drink in Vitamin C content. This is one of the facts established by recent research in Dublin which has amply confirmed views previously advanced about the great nutritional value of the potato.

The potato also has stood up well under recent examination of its calory value. A pound of potatoes contains 330 calories, which is the equivalent in this respect of 5 ounces of English national bread or about 4½ ounces of Irish bread. Putting this calculation in another way, it can be said that four tons of home-grown potatoes releases shipping space for a ton of wheat. It may also be stated that potatoes yield 50 per cent. more calories per acre than wheat.

It has been reckoned that a pound of potatoes per day would give about 11 per cent. of the energy required by a moderately active man. The average person's consumption per day in Ireland is about two pounds.

Research has also confirmed the view previously held about the protective value of the potato against scurvy, and it is pointed out that scurvy has only made widespread appearance in Ireland and other potato-eating countries following periods of famine.

MADAGASCAR ARMISTICE

The French authorities in Madagascar asked for an armistice, and hostilities ceased at 2 p.m. local time on Thursday, it was stated in London yesterday.

An official Vichy announcement last night says that "in full agreement with the Government and faced with the complete impossibility of continuing the fight," the French Commander-in-Chief was yesterday forced to open negotiations to end hostilities.—(Reuter.)

BRITISH AIR RAIDERS

Two hundred Spitfires of British Fighter Command carried out a three-pronged sweep over Occupied France yesterday afternoon, covering an area from Cherbourg to Boulogne, states Air Ministry News Service. One force escorted Bostons to bomb the German airfields at Caen. No air opposition was met. Some ground opposition was encountered at Caen airfield, but it did not interfere with the bombing, and escorting fighter pilots report seeing bursts on the runway and among dispersal huts and other buildings.

Earlier in the day three Spitfires made the long sea crossing to the Scheldt in Holland, and blew up the gasholder at Bergen Op Zoom. It caught fire after one attack and blazed fiercely.

E. S. B. WORKERS' BONUS

CURRENT MAY COST MORE

A further increase in the price of electricity was visualised by Mr. P. J. Dempsey, Secretary of the Electricity Supply Board, at yesterday's sitting in Dublin of the Wages Advisory Tribunal. The increase, he said, would be contingent on the grant of a 5s. bonus, the maximum allowable to upwards of 25 per cent. of their staff, embracing the Nos. 1 and 2 Dublin Districts. It was estimated that the cost of the bonus would be between £15,000 and £20,000.

The Board's attitude towards the bonus question, he said, would incline towards uniformity. The rates of charge for electricity must be determined in accordance with the relevant section of the Act. The Board thought that the bonus should be given to the lower-paid categories. He was not in a position to make any statement in regard to the higher-paid workers.

The last increase of 10 per cent in the price of electricity was early in 1941, and there had been no increase in wages since then owing to the Standstill Order.

Pressed by Mr. M. J. Connolly, K.C., who presided, Mr. Dempsey said that he could not state what increase in revenue this 10 per cent. produced in a year.

Stating that the Tribunal could not carry on in blinkers, Mr. Connolly said that the Board should be in a position to tell them what effect an increase of £20,000 in wages would have on the price of electricity.

Mr. Dempsey said that it would not affect employment, but it would affect the price of electricity and the price of goods.

Leopardstown To-day

SAVE in one instance, fields will be of good size at Leopardstown to-day, and, with two hurdle races and a steeplechase to add variety to the proceedings, very interesting sport is promised. St. Martin is to be saddled for the Clifden 'Chase, but he will meet with stout opposition. He may find it no easy matter to concede a stone to Smerwick's Nephew, a winner twice within the last month, and who, if ridden again by Mr. M. N. Walker, will have his weight reduced by 5lb. The Rathvale stable also has Colehill engaged, but he has not run for some time. Miss Paget will have a dangerous candidate in Capital Star or Housewarmer, while Brighter Kilcash, Knocknagoran, and Prince Blackthorn all have claims for support. Smerwick's Nephew may score. Selections:—

Clonkeen Hurdle—Dulahorne.
Kylemore Hurdle—Slieve Bernagh.
Renvyle Plate—Hamadryad.
Clifden 'Chase—Smerwick's Nephew.
Autumn Plate—Neartle.
Mallaranny Hadicap—Doremi.
Leenane Handicap—Fumble.
Tote Double on fourth and sixth races.

CLEVER FLY-WEIGHTS AT THE STADIUM

The contest in last night's tournament between Leinster and Ulster boxers, at the Stadium, which brought down the house, was the third meeting of the fly-weights, J. Collins and W. Barnes. These seem clearly to be the two best boys at the weight in the country at present, and Collins won by a delightful display of straight left punching. There was nothing between them in the first two rounds, but in the third Collins' left beat a tattoo on Barnes' face, and the Belfast-man could not keep clear of it. At the same time, neat footwork prevented Collins from scoring to any extent, and, even though Barnes did land a few swings in the last round, Collins more than held his own by straighter punching to win an attractive bout.

The inter-provincial aspect was interesting; for the first six contests were shared equally. Then Dowdall beat Bathgate in a furiously energetic affair, in which a rather doubtful punch to the body by Dowdall in the third round had some bearing. Still, Dowdall was much the cleverer of the two.

The last contest of the night was one of the best in a fine show, Colman boxing extremely well to get a narrow verdict over H. W. Kelly, and leave it 6-3 in Leinster's favour.

J. Hyndman, who substituted for T. Pudge in the feather-weight, proved to be a powerful swinger with both hands, and, after hardly laying a glove on the junior champion, B. Coughlan, in the first two rounds, he put the Arbour Hill boy down for two counts of nine in the third. Despite Coughlan's capital recovery, he took more punishment in the last round, and Hyndman won well.

A competent display of boxing and crisp hitting with both hands gave P. Byrne a narrow, but deserved, verdict over J. King, a strong opponent, who came back well in the last round, after taking considerable punishment in the previous one. Byrne, however, had built up too big a lead to be caught. In one of the extra contests the feather-weight champion, A. Delahunt, was surprisingly beaten by the improving Athlone man, M. McCullagh, who did most of the attacking against a somewhat lethargic opponent.

THE RESULTS.

Fly-Weight—J. Collins (Avona) beat W. Barnes (Mackies) on points; P. Downey (Sandymount) beat W. Hall (Windsor) on points.

Feather—P. Byrne (C.B.S.) beat J. King (Mackies) on points; J. Hyndman (Short and Harland's) beat B. Coughlan (Arbour Hill) on points.

Welter—W. Smith (Short and Harland's) beat Cpl. V. Black (Baldonnel), stopped 3th round.

Light—Cpl. P. Dowdall (Islandbridge) beat F. Bathgate (Derry) on points.

Cruiser—J. O'Hagan (Short and Harland's) beat J. Keenan (Portlaoighise) on points; G. Colman (North City) beat H. W. Kelly (Crown) on points.

Other Contests.—Bantam—C. Caffrey (Corinthians) beat D. O'Mara (Portlaoighise) on points. Feather—Pte. M. McCullagh (Athlone) beat A. Delahunt (Arbour Hill) on points.

WALES V. ENGLAND AT SWANSEA

Four times defeated in Services Rugby international matches last winter, England begin this season's programme against Wales at Swansea to-day. On the same ground last year, England lost after holding a lead of 12 points at the interval, and, considering the team difficulties that beset them, they can scarcely hope to win to-day.

Less troubled in getting together a side, Wales appear the stronger; their forwards are younger, and behind them will be the peace-time pair of halves, W. T. H. Davies and Haydn Tanner, besides A. J. Risman, the Rugby League star. J. H. MacDonald, a Maori, is among three Rugby League players in the England three-quarter line.

UTILITY CLOTHES

The Irish Merchant Tailors' Association will meet the Government again next week to discuss details of the proposed introduction of utility clothes to this country. At their last meeting tailors commented upon Governmental suggestions about this matter, and made certain recommendations. Next week the Government will tell them how these recommendations have been received.

These discussions are being carried out on an extremely friendly basis. In a letter to the Irish Times the secretary of the association, Mr. Charles Wright, says that tailors have made no protest in connection with utility clothes. On the contrary, they are "in course of amicable discussions with the Governmental Department dealing with this matter."

R. H. S. SPECIAL PRIZES

Among the special awards made at the Royal Horticultural Society of Ireland Fruit Show on Thursday were:—Gold medal to Albert Agricultural College for a magnificent display of dessert apples for market purposes. Silver medal to Mr. Edward Barry, who packed the apples.

Willis for large Japanese chrysanthemums, being best exhibit in other flower classes; Sir Frederick Moore for best dish of dessert apples, with another medal for best dish of pears; Mr. R. B. Jobson for best dish of cooking apples, and another medal for best dish of dessert apples packed for market; Miss Ella Walsh for best bushel box of dessert apples; Mr. Sylvester O'Farrell for three dishes of dessert apples and three dishes of cooking apples, and another medal for six kinds of vegetables.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Cattle Stealing Alleged.—Myles Nolan, Bishophill, Ballymore-Eustace, was, at Bray yesterday, remanded in custody to Kildare on a charge of the larceny of two head of cattle value £40.

Pig's Cheek Unfit for Food.—Miss Annie Brown, 44 Meath street, was fined £2, with 15/- costs, in Dublin District Court, for selling one pig's cheek unfit for human consumption.

Sold Four Gold Flakes.—Albert Tipple, Albert avenue, Bray, amusement caterer, was, at Bray yesterday, fined £4 for selling four Gold Flake cigarettes for 4d., and £1 for selling them in a number other than five, or multiples of five.

Jailed for Stealing Tree.—Michael Butler, Wolfe Tone square, Bray, and Patrick Gately, a native of Kilconnell, Ballinasloe, were sentenced to two months' and one month's imprisonment, respectively, for stealing a tree the property of the Earl of Meath.

"Jacob's Ladder."—Laurence Housman's spectacular Biblical play, "Jacob's Ladder," is being retained at the Gate Theatre. Ronald Ibbs gives one of the best performances of his career in the character of Jacob, supported by Cathleen Delany, Nora O'Mahony, Doris Cloghran, Michael Ripper, John Izon and Hamlyn Benson.

Live-Stock Diseases. — Between 1st April and 30th September this year there were 41 outbreaks of sheep scab in Eire, against 88 in 1941. During the same period there was a complete absence of foot-and-mouth disease. In the nine months ended 30th September, 1942, 801 animals were declared to be infected with bovine tuberculosis.

SOME CAUSES OF WAR
THE POSITION OF EIRE

Senator J. Douglas, in Trinity College, Dublin, last night, said that Eire had tried to meet her international obligations. She had gone into the League and had carried out her obligations to Abyssinia. People were not willing to spend money on an international effort to prevent war because they had no hope in such effort. Senator Douglas was speaking at the opening meeting of the Dublin University History Society.

Professor J. M. O'Sullivan, T.D., proposing a vote of thanks to the Auditor for his paper, said that the war of this century was the logical outcome of the ideas of the last century, when the nationalism of a few States was regarded as sufficient explanation of whatever happened in international affairs. The Herrenvolk idea was not, in theory, so new as might be supposed. People who were cynical about efforts to prevent war did a great deal to hinder or stop those efforts. The weakness of the League of Nations was in that kind of public opinion.

Mr. O. de Selincourt, M.A., Queen's University, Belfast, said that power politics seemed to him prompted by the fear of insecurity and the desire to prevent a country from future involvement in war.

Mr. F. G. C. Lewis-Crosby, Auditor, in a paper entitled "Causes of War," said that the causes were numerous — racial, territorial, economic or religious—and showed the manner in which an industrial civilisation brought weapons into war which made it so much more ferocious.

The Alison Phillips medal for a paper read to the Society was awarded to Mr. J. N. Ross, Mod., B.A.

Senator Professor J. Johnston also spoke.

THREE MONTHS FOR WOMAN

A sentence of three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, was imposed by Judge Shannon and a jury, in the Circuit Criminal Court, Dublin, yesterday, on Mrs. Annie Blackmore (37), Winston, Churchtown, Dundrum, Co. Dublin, who pleaded not guilty to a charge of having attempted to obtain money by false pretences from Frank Forshaw, Orwell road, Rathgar, by stating that the roof of her mouth had been pierced by a hard object, like a piece of steel, which, she alleged, had been in a piece of brown bread sold by him.

STRANDING OF IRISH SHIP

Senior District Justice Hannan in Dublin yesterday granted the application of Mr. C. O'Daly (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor), on an affidavit of Mr. Henry Freyne, Nautical Surveyor attached to the Department of Industry and Commerce, to have a formal investigation into the stranding of the s.s. Irish Plane on the coast of County Antrim on 14th March last. The s.s. Irish Plane was stated to have been on a voyage in ballast from Gourock Roads, Scotland, to St. John's, New Brunswick.

CURRENCY EXPORT CHARGE

The Southern Fur Manufacturing Co., Ltd., 21-22 Grafton street, were summoned before District Justice Lennon in Dublin yesterday by the Minister for Finance, that, not having an exemption and being entitled, on dates between 23rd February and 23rd April, 1942, to sell or procure the sale of foreign (United States) currency, they did not, within 14 days, either offer it or cause it to be offered for sale by the Minister for Finance.

There were also two summonses against Reuben Davis, 3 Kenilworth road, Rathmines, director of the company, for facilitating by neglect the commission of the offences.

Mr. C. O'Daly (instructed by Mr. J. A. Geary, Chief State Solicitor's Office) said that since the outbreak of the war the export of foreign currency was prohibited, except by permission of the Minister or authorised person.

The further hearing was adjourned until 15th December next.

FUNERAL
MR. THOMAS INGRAM

The funeral of Mr. Thomas Ingram, 1 Williams Park, Rathmines, took place to Mount Jerome Cemetery yesterday. The chief mourners were: Mrs. Hannah Ingram (widow), Messrs. Thomas A., A. M., F. A., J. D., W. M. A., and E. J. Ingram (sons), A. J. Ingram (grandson), Albert and Thomas Woodcock (cousins), A. K. Danson (brother-in-law), Miss S. Brady, Mrs. Felton, and Miss Tucker (relatives). Those present also included the Archdeacon of Dublin, the Ven. E. G. Sullivan; the Rev. M. L. Rughi, Dr. T. Cronhelm, J. Love (representing Cooper and Kenny), Henry G. Ryder, E. Elley, T. Murray, M. Gannon, Mrs. Ramage, Mrs. S. Blakely, Thomas Pattison, F. R. Coldwell, C. Musgrave, R. M. St. Amond, A. A. O'Malley, J. Kavanagh, C. Toole, J. O'Keeffe, E. Hanlon, L. O'Meara, W. Roberts, W. Cooke, T. Murray, A. McFerran, T. P. Adams, Mr. O'Cononr, John O'Connor. The Third Company Boys' Brigade was represented by Messrs. G. H. Pogue, W. J. G. Gourley and R. H. Ferrall. The Rev. Thomas R. Horan officiated at the graveside.

OPTICIANS' PROTEST

"That this meeting of opticians notes with amazement that the National Health Insurance Society, in its new scheme for the restoration of 'optical benefit,' proposes, with the approval of the Minister for Local Government, to deprive ophthalmic opticians, for no reason stated, of their basic right to prescribe suitable lenses for the correction of visual errors." The resolution above was passed at last night's meeting of the Association of Ophthalmic Opticians of Ireland in Jury's Hotel, Dublin. Mr. C. F. Ryan, F.B.O.A., was the proposer, and Mr. P. McGiveney Nolan, Diph. Opt. (A.O.I.), was seconder.

Letters condemning the scheme were received from opticians throughout Ireland.

The meeting regretted that the agreement was unacceptable and could not be signed.

A resolution was passed pledging full support to the Council.

Mr. T. H. Mason, M.R.I.A., who presided, said that the agreement submitted by the Irish National Health Insurance Society for signature was an impossible one for both the sight-testing and the dispensing optician. He added that he felt sure that the authorities would see the justice of their claim and that the unfortunate incident would be forgotten, to the ultimate advantage of the Irish National Health Insurance Society, the insured persons, and the members of the optical profession.

The Poet in Debt
By Austin Clarke

IN a note to one of his later poems, "The Tower," W. B. Yeats wrote: "In the passage about the Swan I have unconsciously echoed one of the loveliest lyrics of our time, Mr. Sturge Moore's 'Dying Swan.' I have often recited it during an American lecturing tour, which explains the theft." The conscientious acknowledgment was not really necessary in this case. For, in a book of criticism published about a dozen years ago by the Cayme Press, with the unusual title, "Armour for Aphrodite," Mr. Sturge Moore attacks the accepted notions of private ownership in poetry. He argues that the respect for exclusive personal rights in poetry is injurious to art and due to the growth of commercialism. In the spacious days of the Elizabethans, as he points out, poets followed the tradition of oral art. They borrowed freely from one another, and frequently improved each other's lines. A promising idea or line started an exciting competition When Chettle wrote:

> The multitude of seas dyed red with blood

Munday followed with:

> And made the green sea red with pagan's blood.

Shakespeare clapped the two lines together into what has become a familiar quotation:—

> The multitudinous seas incarnadine
> Making the green one red.

Yet even in Elizabethan times there seems to have been a limit to open borrowing, if we may judge from the well-known contemporary attack on Shakespeare for his plagiarism.

Private Property

The rights of private property are guarded with religious eloquence. But who, as yet, has heard the sin of plagiarism denounced in church? The regard for private ownership of inspiration in poetry is not so much due to commerce and the value of copyright as to the romantic cult of originality. When poets search laboriously for an unusual epithet, or discover the mot juste, they can scarcely be blamed if they insist on claiming full credit for their work. In the days when it was fashionable to speak of poetic inspiration, the whole truth was not really told. The poet's eye certainly rolls in a fine frenzy, but that frenzy is caused by suspicion and doubt. When a line or phrase comes readymade and with complete ease into the mind, pleasure and pride are quickly shattered by the thought that it may be only another trick of memory. Hence the frantic dash to the nearest anthology, the wild clambering down the rungs of memory to peer into the black depths of the subconscious, perhaps even a few discreet inquiries among friends the next day. The search may be in vain, but months later the clue is found.

It is comparatively easy to guard against the influence of less popular poets, Francis Thompson, Hopkins, Hardy and the like. The real dangers are those popular poets whose lines and phrases have passed into the general mind: Tennyson, Longfellow, Emerson. Glancing through Longfellow's "Evangeline" the other day, I came on the line—

> On Sunday morn while the bell from its turret
> Sprinkled with holy sounds the air.

Was that the origin of a much-admired metaphor of A. E. Housman?—

> He stood, and heard the steeple
> Sprinkle the quarters on the morning town.

Everyone knows the oft-quoted lines of Kipling's "Recessional"—

> Lord of our far-flung battle-line—
> Beneath whose awful hand we hold
> Dominion over palm and pine—

(Continued from previous column.) Were they suggested by the lines in which Emerson anticipated the triumph of the steam-ship?—

> I give my rafters to his boat,
> My billets to his boiler's throat,
> And I will swim the ancient sea
> To float my child to victory,
> And grant to dwellers with the pine
> Dominion o'er the palm and vine.

Academic critics usually accept such parallelisms as unconscious echoes. Yet logical association of ideas or chance verbal attractions may be sometimes the real explanation. The slight similarities between Yeats's lines on the Swan and Mr. Sturge Moore's are caused by the poetic convention of the theme itself. Perhaps the real debt in both cases was to Tennyson's early poem, "The Dying Swan."

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

The "Sesame" Book

Introducing James Joyce. With an introduction by T. S. Eliot. London: Faber and Faber. 3/6 net.
Storm and Precipice. By Neil M. Gunn. London: Faber and Faber. 3/6 net.

THE "Sesame" series of books is to modern writers what the "Everyman" series is to the classics. The latest titles to be added to the series are "Introducing James Joyce," a series of selections from the work of this writer, and "Storm and Precipice," a series of extracts from short stories and novels by Neil M. Gunn.

"Introducing James Joyce" should be especially popular; for up to the present it has not been possible for the common man to form an opinion on "Ulysses" unless he visits the Continent or buys a copy on the literary "black market" at a high fee. The book contains one short story from "Dubliners," the Christmas dinner sequence from "Portrait of the Artist," and long extracts from "Ulysses" and "Finnegans Wake."

Both of these books are beautifully bound and printed.

Sporting Tales

Best Sporting Stories. London: Faber and Faber. 8/6 net.

THE stories in this volume have been chosen by J. Wentworth Day, and he has certainly gathered a representative bag. His twenty tales cover not only the games that one would expect to find in such a collection, such as cricket, football and golf, and such activities as hunting, shooting and fishing; he has taken in ice-hockey, motor racing and stalking.

Scattered Shots. By Major C. S. Jarvis. London: John Murray. 7/6

THOSE who remember "Oriental Spotlight" will look for laughs in this latest work of "Rameses." The first chapter gives the impression that one is going to get them, but unexpectedly the author turns to bird migration, shooting in the Nile Valley and the Desert, fishing in the Gulf of Akaba and other sporting and ornithological matters.

The humorous touch is still there, but the subject matter is serious.

POET FOR SALE
By PADRAIC FALLON

AND now I must find
A furred fat widow with a lapdog
Who will lecture me out of a cheque book softly while I
Recline at my ease
In her cushioned bank deposits
And securities:

For surely from to-day I am the times' pensioner,
I with my skull full of love
And pity and other jackdaw's rubbish which glittered
One time for all lands,
If I, the gesturer, do not deprecate the old gestures
And the sweet wringing of my hands.

If to-day I do not turn the hands to trigger
Fingers and make the heart a forge for guns
I bid good-morrow to to-day and follow
Time into its solitudes
Where yesterday with Napoleon shouldering his Europe
Collapses down the latitudes.

Come then rich hag, O be my island!
My lucky Saint Helena before Time
Hurries me off or caps your simple head
With a fool's dull rest
Or knocks Earth over her nebulous crutch of stars
To batter herself on Hercules.

Love Without End. By Lewis Cox. London: Hutchinson. 8/6 net.

A wartime romance would adequately describe Lewis Cox's latest novel, but "Love Without End" is hardly an appropriate title. A flippant young lady—"blitzed" from her home in London—is billeted along with her three brothers on the farm of an ex-soldier, who was wounded during the evacuation from Dunkirk. Anxious to enjoy life, but strong-willed, she finds herself in many love intrigues.

Ask the Young. By Anne Vernon.

Described as an original and amusing romance, this is an average full-length novel on war-economy paper, telling of the conflict between war and duty. (Stanley Paul, 8/6 net.)

Conversations in Elysium

The Raft, and Socrates Asks Why. By Eric Linklater. London: Macmillan. 4/6 net.

SOME months ago Eric Linklater produced a book called "The Cornerstones," which consisted of an imaginary conversation between Confucius, Lincoln, Lenin and a young British Air Force pilot, also deceased, during the course of which this oddly-associated convention reached the conclusion that the only hope of a world peace would be by the establishment of a four-fold world-wide rule, by Britain, China, Russia and the United States of America, the "cornerstones" of the title.

The book at present under review is a further examination of the same plan, and it brings Socrates, Voltaire, Beethoven and Johnston into the discussion. That such cheap propaganda is necessary and desirable, both from the nation's and Mr. Linklater's point of view, I have no doubt, but I do not see why the author cannot express these trite and mundane theories without putting his words into the mouths of great men who would undeniably turn in their graves if they knew what was happening.

This business of bringing great writers and thinkers of past ages back to life on the slightest provocation in order to advertise anything from a political theory to a new brand of patent medicine will have to be controlled before it reaches the realms of the ridiculous. It is only the writers, both of books and advertisement signs, that can take such liberties and get away with them.

No artist would dream of painting a picture and labelling it: "Giotto's Interpretation of a Portable Typewriter"; no musician would dare to concoct a piece of music and entitle it: "A Variation on a Boogy-Woogy Theme by César Franck." Yet anybody with a pen and ink, some paper, and a publisher can resurrect a wit, poet or philosopher, the product of some greater age, and put into his mouth the muddle-headed verbal wanderings of the Twentieth Century in search of an explanation for its own aimlessness.

The book has little to recommend it apart from its topicality, but it probably will enjoy a great success in Britain, where it will reiterate the hopes of the plain people.

FINANCIAL NOTES
By Our Special Correspondent.

ONE of the busiest sections on the Stock Exchange recently has been that devoted to Rubber shares. The spirit of pessimism which prevailed when so many estates fell into the hands of the Japanese has given place to a more hopeful optimism, and quotations have been rising steadily. What the trees will be like when possession is regained, however, no one can say; but, as Mr. Miller, the chairman of Harrisons and Crosfield, said recently, "rubber trees are tough, and there seems no reason to take a gloomy view."

Some of the appreciation is, no doubt, due to the shortage of supplies. When prices crashed as estate after estate fell into the hands of the Japanese, selling, though substantial, was not overwhelming, and, now that recovery is in progress, holders are distinctly unwilling to part with their shares.

A final dividend of 5 p.c., again making 7½ p.c. for the year, is announced by Joshua Hoyle and Sons, Ltd. Trading profit was £194,332 (against £211,580). The company's present capital is £734,034, 16/-, all in 2/ Ord. shares. This will be increased after November 30 by the issue to shareholders, at 2/6 per share, of 1,835,087 new Ord. shares to provide the funds necessary to redeem £249,144 of 4 p.c. Notes.

Since the drastic capital reorganisation in 1937 the company has been successful in earning profits, and this is the third year for which 7½ p.c. has been paid. The 2/- shares are quoted at 3/4½.

The interim dividend of 10 p.c. just declared by British Plaster Board, Ltd., draws attention to a company operating in an industry which has grown immensely in recent years. This growth is illustrated in the development of this one concern; for ten years ago its Ord. capital was only £100,000, whereas to-day it is £1,598,613.

SET-BACK IN GUINNESS

MARKETS finished a very satisfactory week on the Dublin Stock Exchange in fairly brisk fashion yesterday. Profit-taking sales caused an easier trend in places, but the undertone remained firm. Interest, which for some time past centred mainly in Irish Securities, is switching over to good-class cross-Channel Industrials.

Home Funds inclined firmer, but Banks made a neglected showing.

Following the previous day's sharp advance, Guinness units came in sellers, and relapsed 1/9 to 118/-, and they looked sellers at the finish.

Dull conditions prevailed among Home Rails on fresh liquidation. Great Northern Ord. fell 15/- to 26¼, and the Guaranteed eased to 49¼. Great Southern Ord. lost 17/6 at 27¼, the Guaranteed drooped to 50¼, and the Deb. shaded off to 69¼.

Dublin Transport Ord. and Alliance Gas Ord. both added pence. In Draperies, Pim. Bros. Pref. lost some of their recent strength in a fall of 2/- to 40/-; but Todd Burns Ord. gained a further 1/- at 16/-.

Carroll Ord. jumped 1/6 to 31/6. H. Williams Ord. 5/- to 82/6, and Williams and Woods Ord. hardened to 28/3. Strong buying of Smyth and Co. Ord. resulted in a sharp spurt of 5/9 to 26/-. Irish Cinema Ord. rose to 3/3, and other Irish Industrials, where dealt in, held up well.

GOLD SHARES BRIGHT

The outstanding feature in yesterday's market was the sharp rise in Kaffir developing Co.'s shares, on renewed buying by Johannesburg. Libanons started the ball rolling with another jump of 1/9 to 11/9, while Blyvoor reached the record price of 44/3. West Wits rose to 6¼.

Guinness, after touching 118/6, suffered a relapse and finished 1/6 down at 116/6. British Rails were firm and Argentines, after a dull opening, rallied a little.

After the meeting of British Celanese, at which agreement was announced on the funding plan, Celanese issues improved, the Ord. being 3d. up at 16/6. Other good spots were a jump of 10½d. in Dunlop Rubber and a similar gain in Marks and Spencer.

Oils finished generally harder. Rubbers were quite steady.

COMPANY MEETING.

W. AND H. M. GOULDING
FERTILISER POSITION

A large quantity of phosphatic fertiliser will be available to the Irish farmer next spring, if all goes well, but nitrogen and potash fertilisers will probably be in short supply, said Mr. J. W. Milne, deputy chairman and managing director of Messrs. W. and H. M. Goulding, Ltd., in the seventieth annual report of the company, which was submitted at the general meeting in 22 Molesworth street, Dublin, yesterday.

The dividends of 5¼ per cent. on the Preference and 6 per cent. on the Ordinary for the half-year ended June 30, 1942, which have already been paid, were confirmed.

The managing director apologised on behalf of the chairman, Sir Basil Goulding, for the latter's absence.

The net profits for the year amounted to £31,314, to which was added the balance brought forward from last year of £20,170, leaving a balance of £51,485. Dividends amounted to £12,887, leaving a balance of £38,597 for disposal.

The managing director said:—

After three years' working under war conditions we would like to say something about the superphosphate position from the manufacturers' point of view. Superphosphate is produced by dissolving rock phosphate with sulphuric acid. That is a simple definition, without going into technical detail. The industry depends on the import of rock phosphate and the sulphur pyrites necessary to manufacture the sulphuric acid required.

We welcome the Government decision to provide shipping space for a certain quantity of these raw materials. In announcing this, the Minister for Agriculture stated that the cost would be so high that the State would have to make some contribution. In considering this problem, which is a national one, two questions naturally arise—is it worth the money and can the country afford it? That is a matter for the Government to decide, but, in our opinion, the reply is definitely "Yes." To-day, above all, the essential requirement of all nations, belligerent or neutral, is the provision of food for its people, a matter which cannot be left to the chance that it can be imported at short notice if home supplies run short. To "the man in the street," although chemical fertilisers have been much in the news lately, fertilisers are merely something which the farmer uses; but to the agricultural community and the country as a whole they are a vital necessity for food production.

I sometimes wonder if we fully realise that every item of our food—except, perhaps, fish—has its origin in the land. The lands feeds us, but we must feed the land.

Since the outbreak of war the fertiliser supply position has steadily deteriorated, and last season the amount of plant food which the farmer got was only a very small fraction of his normal usage. The position which the country is facing to-day is that the shortage of chemical fertilisers, and the consequent drain on natural soil fertility, must result in a steady decrease in the yield per acre, and everything must be done to adjust that position as far as possible.

With two million acres under tillage, an over-all increase or decrease of even 5 cwts. in the yield per acre means half a million tons of food. I only give this figure to illustrate the importance of "crop yield" in our tillage campaign. Every additional ton produced will help and safeguard our food position and give the country a good return on the money expended to provide the fertiliser, difficult and expensive though that programme may be.

You will expect us to say something about the suitability and availability of native raw material, which is a matter of very great importance. Since the outbreak of war we have used a substantial quantity of Clare phosphate, and it was mainly that source which enabled the manufacturers to supply the tonnage of emergency compound fertiliser which was delivered to the farmer last season. We confidently anticipate that a larger tonnage of Clare phosphate will be available during the current season, but we must still rely on imported phosphate for our main requirements.

The other native material is Avoca pyrites, and although numerous samples have been examined, no material has yet been found suitable to replace imported pyrites for the manufacture of sulphuric acid.

The report and accounts were adopted.

TOO MANY CHEMISTS
LEGISLATION NEEDED

A serious view is being taken by Irish pharmacists of the present unrestricted entry into their profession.

This, said Mr. P. C. Cahill (president), addressing the annual meeting of the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland, was bad for the community as a whole, because he could visualise overcrowding becoming so chronic as to compel large numbers of qualified chemists to poach on the preserves of other sections of the community. They were trying to have discussions with the members of the Government on the possibility of giving the Society power to regulate the numbers entering the profession.

It was proposed to press for legislation to prevent any future formation of company pharmacies, and, even more important still, to prevent individuals or partnerships from opening branch pharmacies. A disciplinary board, compulsory membership of the Pharmaceutical Society and limitation of the numbers entering the profession were other important proposals.

Reporting on the membership of the Society, he said the figure was 685, the highest in the Society's history. The number of licentiates on the register was 1,505, being an increase of 20, and also a record figure. This number was, of course, far in excess of the country's requirements.

The following were elected to vacancies on the Council:—J. K. Whelehan, Mullingar; J. P. Kissane, Tipperary; E. J. MacSweeny, Cork; P. Brooke-Kelly, Enniscorthy; M. Costello, Marino, Dublin; T. C. Scott, Harold's Cross, Dublin, and William Cunningham, Dublin.

At a Council meeting held subsequently, Mr. John Gleeson, Terenure, Vice-president of the Society for the past two years, was unanimously elected President for the year 1942-43. Mr. C. J. Cremen was elected Vice-president, and Mr. P. C. Cahill, the outgoing President, Honorary Treasurer also for the ensuing year.

OPERA AT GAIETY

At the Gaiety Theatre next Monday the Rathmines and Rathgar Musical Society are presenting Gilbert and Sullivan's "Utopia Limited" and "The Sorcerer." What promises to be unique in the history of the Society is the premier presentation of the operetta, "The Impresario," a story of the trials and frailties of operatic personages, by D. J. Giltinan and Dermot Macmurrough (Harold R. White). The Society have chosen very strong casts for these operas, with such well-known names as Eileen Clancy, Maureen Harold, Eileen Furlong, Kathleen Maher, Gladys MacNevin, Tessie Coleman, Robert MacCullagh, R. J. Tierney, Richard Midgley, A. E. Glynn, P. J. Henry, C. F. Bruton and Jack O'Connor.

Stalin's Speech

Speaking in Moscow yesterday on the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Russian revolution, Monsieur Stalin had some interesting comments to make on Russia's position in the war, and, in particular, on her actual relations with Great Britain and the United States. The Russian leader is a forthright person. He might say, with Othello:

"Rude am I in my speech,
And little blessed with the soft phrase of peace";

for Josef Stalin has been fighting all his life, not only against foreign enemies of the Russian State, but also against the native lethargy and happy-go-luckiness that had become a tradition of Russian life under the Tsarist régime. His speech yesterday, therefore, contained none of the niceties of diplomatic circumlocution. It was direct, uncompromising, and, at times, almost brutally frank. For that very reason, it probably was one of the most valuable war statements that have been made since the outbreak of the struggle, and its pungent sentences ought to blow like a gust of fresh air through the dusty Chancelleries of Europe. Monsieur Stalin divided his speech into two parts. The one dealt with the organisation of Russia's home front—a truly gigantic task—and the other with the defensive and offensive operations of the Red Army since Germany's attack on the Soviet Union seventeen months ago. In regard to the home front, he gave a fascinating description of the way in which essential industries had been evacuated wholesale to the East of Russia, beyond the Urals; of the increase that had been brought about in the area and volume of agricultural production throughout the vast territories of the Union, and of the steps that had been taken to strengthen Labour discipline in the teeth of the most formidable difficulties. The story of the organisation of Russia's railway system alone constitutes one of the greatest industrial romances of all time. In the nature of things, however, the bulk of Monsieur Stalin's speech was devoted to the actual conduct of the war from the standpoint of the Red Army. He paid a high tribute to Russia's fighting men, who had done what the soldiers of no other nation on earth had been able to do—namely, to withstand a determined and highly concentrated attack by Germany's Wehrmacht. The figures which he quoted were impressive. According to his calculations—and we presume that he was not talking merely at random—Germany has 256 divisions at her disposal. Of these, 179 are being used against Russia; and, as auxiliaries, the Germans have the services of twenty-two Rumanian, fourteen Finnish, ten Italian, one Spanish, one Slovak and thirteen Hungarian divisions—a grand total of 240 divisions, which have been trying for nearly a year and a half to smash Russia's resistance.

Monsieur Stalin admitted frankly that the Germans had scored "serious tactical successes." They had taken advantage of the absence of a second front in Europe to concentrate vast numbers of troops against the Russian front in the South-West, and, in this way, had been able to obtain a "large numerical superiority." Nevertheless, he asserted that the German Army was showing signs of inherent weaknesses, and that in almost every respect its troops were inferior in quality to those of the Soviets. Throughout his speech he stressed the point that, if there had been a second front in Europe, as there was in the last Great War, the Germans never would have been able to hold their own against the Red Army. If even eighty of the 240 divisions operating against Russia had been withdrawn—sixty German and twenty auxiliary divisions—Germany's position at the moment would have been "lamentable," and Herr Hitler's forces would have been faced with the beginning of the end. They had been saved by the absence of a second front. Monsieur Stalin, on the other hand, reaffirmed his belief that the Anglo-American allies would establish a second front in time, not only because it was necessary for the Russians, but because it was necessary for themselves. Almost for the first time a Russian spokesman took his stand publicly on the side of Great Britain and the United States. He did not attempt to deny that there were ideological differences between the Soviet Union and its allies; but he asserted that those who believed that these differences made joint action impossible were wrong. There had been a steady rapprochement between Russia, on the one hand, and Great Britain and the United States, on the other, with the result that a strong fighting alliance had been created which eventually would defeat "Hitlerite Germany." The Russian leader was careful to differentiate between the German nation and the National-Socialist régime. It would be just as impossible, he declared, to destroy Germany as it would be to destroy Russia; but the National-Socialist system, which preached the doctrine of racial hatred, the supremacy of the chosen nations, and the subjugation of the others, must be destroyed. Russia, in common with Great Britain and the United States, stood for the abolition of racial exclusiveness and the general equality of the nations. Monsieur Stalin is no hypocrite. From start to finish his speech made it abundantly clear that the alliance between Russia and the Anglo-Saxon democracies is an ad hoc arrangement, with the common purpose to wipe out what he described as "Fascist dictatorship." Yet, he made it equally clear that Russia and her Allies would stand together until final victory should be secured. The logic of events, he said, is greater than any other logic. That is why Josef Stalin, Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt are ranged together to-day against Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Things to Come

Several weeks ago the Royal Academy, which is reputed to be a conservative organisation, submitted a plan for the rebuilding of London that was anything but conservative. Unfortunately, the British newspapers forbore to expatiate on the topic; but they gave sufficient information to indicate that the Academy's aspirations were artistic and "academic," rather than practical and—to use an objectionably loose adjective—"social." Prominently displayed, for example, was a picture of Piccadilly Circus. As the Circus stands—or stood before the war—it was a rather mean little area, surrounded by undistinguished buildings, but swirling with life, and possessing a curious character of its own, which differentiated it from the social centre of any other city in Europe or the world. The Royal Academy Committee had other ideas for Piccadilly Circus. It pictured it as something between the Place de l'Etoile, in Paris, and a futuristic vision from Astounding Stories. The familiar statue of Eros stood, indeed, in the centre, but he was invested with high buildings—constructed, after the Parisian fashion, around small courtyards—which might have been hotels or commercial edifices after a new order, but had an infinitely closer relation to a city of the future than to the traditional London. We do not wish to malign the Royal Academy. It is an assembly of artists, and its committee was, presumably, an assembly of artists. Artists, however, are not the people to design the world of to-morrow. They have their own ideas, which are excellent so far as they go—but they do not go far enough; they do not go into the root of things. It is eminently desirable that a city shall be beautiful; it is arguable, indeed, that a city which is beautiful will possess most of the other qualities that are praiseworthy in a city—but, in the fallen state of man, beauty is not the first requisite of town-planning; and the architect is not the best town-planner. There are other people whose demands take precedence over his. There is the engineer, with his insistence upon sewerage; there is the doctor, with his demand for a decent space between houses and a decent cubic capacity for rooms; there is the traffic expert, requiring that streets shall be wide or narrow as occasion may demand. The duty of the town-planner is to co-ordinate the requirements of all these authorities, laying proper insistence upon the necessity of proper living conditions and social convenience. Civic beauty is a secondary consideration. Let suburbs be ordained and planned in accordance with the decree of the engineer and medical authority—and let them be executed in consultation with the architect. Let the approaches to a great city, and the highways through it, be devised with a view to speedy and convenient movement—and let the buildings that give them their character be the work of artists, acting upon definite instructions. The architect is not a leader, but a follower; his job is not to create, but to adorn.

OBITUARY
MR. C. MAUDE

The death took place yesterday at Lenaghan Park, Enniskillen, of Mr. Christopher Maude, D.L. He was the youngest son of the late Mr. Maurice Maude, who was a prominent land agent in the old days. Mr. Christopher Maude was agent for Lord Dunally and the Montgomery estate, and also estate manager for the Earl of Belmore. He married Betty, only daughter of the Bishop of Clogher and the late Mrs. MacManaway. There is one son of the marriage, who is at Eton.

THE LATE MR. JOHN T. O'DOCKERY

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Irish Times, Ltd., Mr. Loftus Arnott (Chairman) presiding, a vote of condolence was passed with Mrs. O'Dockery and her family and relatives on the death of her husband, Mr. J. T. O'Dockery, late manager of the Irish Times. The resolution was proposed by the chairman and seconded by Sir Lauriston Arnott, managing director.

At its meeting this week, Mr. H. F. Tivy (Evening Mail), in the chair, the Dublin Newspaper Managers' Committee, on the motion of Mr. J. Dunne (Independent Newspapers, Ltd.), seconded by Mr. J. C. Dempsey (Irish Press, Ltd.), the following resolution was passed, those present standing in silence:

"That the Secretary convey to Mrs. O'Dockery and family the deep sympathy of the Committee with them in the heavy loss they have sustained by the death of Mr. J. T. O'Dockery, a loss shared by his fellow-members on the Committee, who mourn the loss of a faithful friend."

Sir Lauriston Arnott thanked the Committee on behalf of the late Mr. O'Dockery's colleagues on the Irish Times.

Numerous telegrams, letters and telephoned messages of sympathy addressed to the Directors, to the Editor, and to the management and staff of the Irish Times have been, and are being, acknowledged daily.

RADIO PLAYWRIGHTS

Better playwrights is the new motto of Radio Eireann. It was learned in Dublin yesterday that the higher fees for radio programmes, announced in the Dail, have been arranged chiefly to obtain for the radio the services of well-known playwrights and artists who, up to the present, have not regarded the fees paid by Radio Eireann as sufficient inducement to write for the radio.

Seánculottes, a GAAthlete.

Table dóighte, one of those incinerated restaurant meals that have our stomachs the way they are.

The other day I was studying an advertisement issued by the Local Appointments Commissioners. It was headed "Postanna Folamha." In the 1st place there is no Dinnine sanction for the plural in -anna. "Puist" and "Postaí" are all the eminent legsy-cog-river re-cog-noises. And it means "Empty Mails." In other words Gene Autry has cleaned out the po-knee ex-press again.

But no matter. Your men are looking for a TIMTHIRE CONGANTA CIONDARGAIRDIN. SCALA TUARASDAIL: £170-£10-£250 sa bhliain maille le costais beatha. CAILIOCHTAI. Caithfidh gach iarrthóir bheith traenalta mar mhúinteoir náisiúnta nó cúrsa..... etc.

Now the book says that "timthire" means a lay-brother, an agent, a mischief-maker, and "timthireacht" means doing housework. Then Ciondargáirdín. Surely this should read Ciondalgáirdín, meaning a diminutive polisman who is charged with the distribution of leabhair ciondála, or ration books? But wait. The next line gives a clue that shows (beyond a shadow of doubt) that a musician and preferably a singer is intended. Scála Tuarasdail £170-£10-£250. That's £430 a year isn't it? Well I don't know of course it might be all right in Milan but it would scarcely enough to buy your way into the radio here.

But stay, what else do I see? (Don't go yet.) "Maille le bonus costais batha." The dictionary says that "costas" means food, provision. Apparently then 'good food for life' is included as a perquisite.

Now let's see what we have? It appears that the Commissioners have an opening for a young mischief-maker accustomed to housework to assist tiny constabulary in the distribution of ration books by singing grand opera in the Italian manner. This aspiring young Gaelic speaker must produce satisfactory evidence of his work at Milan and with the N.Y.Met. and must in addition have received training as a National School teacher (or alternatively 'must in addition have travelled extensively on state railways in his capacity as N.T.') (Ever hear of a non-NT-ty?)

I suggest (with respect) that it is an insult to offer this world-weary tight-lipped cosmopolitan a mere four-thirty for this arduous work, even throwing in these alleged 'good meals'

HIGH SCHOOL, DUBLIN
CO-OPERATION PLEA

A plea for better understanding between school boards, which would put an end to the present "suicidal competition and unnecessary challenge" between secondary schools, was made by Dr. E. H. Alton, Provost of Trinity College, at the annual Prize Day of the High School, Dublin, yesterday. "I think we are not up-to-date," said Dr. Alton, who presided and distributed the prizes. "There is too much scattering of endowments and dissipation of energies. We could make better use of the endowments we have got by co-operation and consolidation. I hope that an earnest endeavour will be made to get understanding between school boards."

Dr Alton and the Headmaster, Dr. John Bennett, M.A., paid tributes to the memory of the late Prof. W. E. Thrift, late Provost of Trinity College.

Dr. Bennett said that Prof. Thrift had done an immense amount of public work. By his death the school had lost a great man and a great friend. The present Provost, Dr. Alton, was also an old boy of the school, which gave the school a record probably unique. Both of these men had been in the Dail and Senate, and had done a great deal to bring greater understanding between opposing parties in Ireland.

In his report Dr. Bennett said that 43 prizes were won in religious knowledge, 5 honours and 7 passes in the Department of Education Certificate examinations, 3 sizarships in the Trinity College Entrance examinations, the prizes amounting to £700; 14 boys entered Trinity College and 2 entered the College of Surgeons. The number of boys enrolled in the autumn was higher than for two years. The boxing team won the Ellerker Cup.

Mr. C. H. Darley, President of the Old Boys' Union, distributed prizes presented by the union.

The prize-winners were: — Old Boys' Cup, C. F. G. Delaney. Carpenter Memorial Prize, L. J. Clein. John Phillips Rogers Prizes, W. B. Lyons, L. J. Clein. Mr. Warnock's Irish Prize, G. W. Williams. Mr. May's Music Prizes, D. G. Duff, R. R. Quin, I. S. Couse.

WEDDING

Paddle-Gibson.—The wedding took place on Tuesday last at Christ Church, Rathgar, of Mr. R. H. Paddle, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Paddle, Somerleyton, Sandycove, County Dublin, and Miss Margaret Gibson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Gibson, Lindolle, Churchtown, County Dublin. The Rev. R. Montgomery officiated. The bride was given away by her father, and Miss Millicent Ledwich was bridesmaid. Mr. L. Kirker was best man. After a reception held at the Royal Hibernian Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Paddle left for the North of Ireland.

PARISH COUNCILS

At a meeting of delegates to the Conference of Dublin Parish Councils and Emergency Committees, held at 3 St. Stephen's Green, reports on the working of the conference since its inception almost two years ago, were presented, and it was unanimously decided to continue on an annual basis. The officers elected for the coming year were:—Mr. T. Condren Flinn, Donnybrook, Chairman; Mr. M. Kenny, Dalkey, Vice-Chairman; Mr. P. A. Sheehan, Rathfarnham, Vice-Chairman, and Mr. W. C. Toomey, Dundrum, Hon. Secretary and Treasurer. The report set out a summary of the activities during the past two years, and its work on allotments, turf, parish kitchens, emergency meals, home-makers' guilds, A.R.P., cheap and free fuel for the poor, timber and turf prices. It stressed that the present dormancy in Parish Council effort must be eliminated by drafting and planning a concrete programme for Parish Councils.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

HOW in one test the giving of a school meal designed to make good the worst deficiencies of the home diet in a poor district was followed by a great increase in weight and improved physiological condition is revealed by Mr. Charles S. Segal, a London schoolmaster, who has spent some ten years investigating the conditions under which backward children live. The improvement in their mental condition was equally marked. The children showed greater powers of concentration, greater interest and better memory. In five months some of them increased in the "reading age" by more than two years. The results were obtained by only a partial correction of malnutrition, and one well may wonder what would be the improvement if nutritional deficiencies were wholly rectified.

London Smoke

London smoke was a problem even in the days of Charles II. The diarist, John Evelyn, wrote of "this horrid smoke which obscures our churches, and makes our palaces look old, which fouls our clothes and corrupts the waters, so that the very rain precipitates this impure vapour." The problem of atmospheric pollution, against which all the resources of modern scientific research are being mobilised, is one of the oldest troubles of society. A picture of the blanket of dirt which hovers over the modern townsman's head can be imagined from the fact that nearly nine million tons of smoke are poured into the air over Britain every year, and that the nation's bill for this discharge and its twin nuisance, fog, is estimated at about £80,000,000 a year. At London's officially smokiest spot, Lambeth, the year's dirt fall per square mile is more than four hundred tons—four times as great as at Kew. Central London in winter gets only half the sunlight which falls at Kew, but industry is not chiefly responsible. Two-thirds or more of London's smoke damage results from the old-fashioned kitchen ranges and open fires in London homes.

"The Royal Albion"

Since the ban on visits to Brighton was temporarily removed a few weeks ago, many people who live inland have seen the sea for the first time for two or three years. Brighton's most famous hotel, however, "The Royal Albion," made world-famous by the late Sir Harry Preston, remains closed. It was Brighton's first war-time casualty among the big hotels last year. Many members of the Royal Family have visited the hotel, and in recent years important, but private, political talks have been held there.

Irish Stores

Four hundred and three head of Irish store cattle were sold at Spalding Cattle Market this week for £13,334. The cattle were an outstanding lot, and some good prices were realised. The top price was £40 10s. per head for twenty cross-bred Hereford steers. £40 each was given for twenty-three other cross-bred Herefords. Black polled bullocks made as much as £38 15s. each for one lot of twelve.

Ballynennan Moon

If Ballynennan Moon wins the second flash as Wimbledon to-morrow, it will be his fourteenth consecutive win on fourteen Saturdays, and he will need only one further win to equal Mick the Miller's record of fifteen consecutive wins. At Bristol last Saturday he scored over strong opposition, and won a handsome antique silver dish, value £35, in addition to the £50 prize for the race. He now has won forty-three of his forty-nine races, as compared with "Mick's" forty-four out of his first fifty-nine. "Ballynennan" cannot overtake "Mick" in this respect, because "Mick" ran only sixty-one races in Britain, and he won forty-six of them. Thirteen of them were matches, whereas all "Ballynennan's" efforts have been in races. It is tolerably certain that "Ballynennan" will eclipse "Mick's" total of forty-six wins here again. However, it must be remembered that "Mick" won fifteen out of his twenty races in Ireland before crossing the Channel.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Memorial Gone

The decision of the Minister for Justice, Mr. Gerald Boland, to permit a non-stop opening of public-houses from 10 a.m. to 10.30 p.m. on week-days has abolished what was a unique memorial to Kevin O'Higgins. When he was Minister for Justice, Mr. O'Higgins introduced the "split-hour" closing between 2.30 and 3.30 p.m. "to shake up the long sitter," as he himself aptly phrased the effort.

In the Chicago Tribune of July 2nd of this year a table was published showing the changes in the consumption of distilled spirits per capita in the United States, which is of topical interest.

In 1900 each person used up slightly more than five quarts, which went up to about six and a half quarts in 1907, falling slightly in 1910, and remaining stationary at six quarts from 1911 to 1913. Consumption went down to almost five quarts in 1915 and right up to six and a half quarts in 1917. Down it went to slightly over three in 1919, after which came prohibition.

Here is a gap in the chart marked "Zero," but the table compiler added the words "Oh Yeah." In 1936 consumption was up to almost four quarts, and in 1941 was on the line of five quarts.

Brilliant Student

I learn with pleasure that Miss Maura MacEntee, daughter of Mr. Sean MacEntee, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, has been awarded a travelling studentship by the National University, the subjects being Irish and English.

MISS MAURA MACENTEE.

Miss MacEntee is the daughter not only of a well-known father, but of a brilliant mother. Mrs. MacEntee is herself a fine linguist. Born Miss Margaret Browne, she is the sister of the Rev. Professor Patrick Browne, of Maynooth, a man equally distinguished in mathematical and linguistic scholarship. He holds a degree in mathematics from the University of Rome, and has translated many works from ancient Greek into Irish.

Owing to travel restrictions it is unlikely that Miss MacEntee will be able to go and study at the English Universities; so special permission has been granted her to hold the studentship in Ireland.

Guy Fawkes' Day

Remember, remember, the Fifth of November! How many people forgot it this year? I, old fireworks "fan" as I am, almost did so myself. It was nearly midnight when I suddenly noticed the date at the head of a newspaper, and I wished that I had just one small Roman candle to light in memory of gunpowder, treason and plot.

Guy Fawkes's Day has never been much observed in this country, perhaps because there was always quite enough of gunpowder, treason and plot without consecrating a special day to them. I, myself, was always brought up to "remember the guy," and my young life was many a time almost terminated by back-firing rockets and Chinese Cannons.

Gunpowder is being used at the moment for rather more serious matters than Chinese Cannons; but I hope that when fireworks are again on the market I may be one of the first to bring Guy Fawkes back to town.

Radio Pioneer

There is, naturally, very little news from Paris at the moment about private citizens; so I do not know whether the fortunes of war have spared M. Edouard Branly.

M. Branly was one of the founders of radiotelegraphy. If he is still alive and well, he should by now be celebrating his ninety-seventh birthday—probably with a day's work in the laboratory where he has been conducting his researches for the past sixty-five years.

The last report I heard, two years ago, was that he was at last discussing the prospect of retiring—when he reached the age of one hundred!
